SENATE NEARS VOTE ON SHOALS RESOLUTION

Tennessee Will Be Bridged By Government

ALABAMA GETS LION SHARE AS CONGRESS APPROPRIATES SUM

Twenty-Five Millions To Be Spent In Southland

THIS STATE GETS 16 MILLIONS

Approved For Better Mail Service And Market Avenue

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 2.—The general prosperity of the South was singularly reflected in the passage by the national house of representatives, yesterday, of bills authorizing the construction of 25 bridges in five southern states. In addition an expenditure of $2,000,000 for the improvement of Savannah harbor was recommended by Major General Harry Taylor, chief of engineers, United States army.

Alabama came off with a lion's share of bridges in yesterday's legislation, that state drawing 16 of the 25 million. Arkansas came next with three. Virginia and Louisiana came next with two each, while Tennessee and Mississippi were awarded one each.

This legislation was regarded in Washington, dispatches from the national capitol said, as an indication of the federal government's response to the South's demand for quicker mail service in the rural districts and a greater opening of avenues to market for the farmer.

The house authorized the Alabama state highway department to construct 16 bridges in Alabama. A number of these bridges are crossing the Tennessee River, others are located directly in the Tennessee Valley. The authorization provides bridging the Elk River on the Athens-Florence highway, the Tennessee river near Scottsboro, the Tennessee River near Whitesburg Ferry and the Tennessee River near Guntersville.

Appropriations to the state of Alabama were looked upon with favor in this section of the state inasmuch as the state has been under a handicap for years in the matter of rural transportation facility.

INDUSTRIAL BANK IS TO BE FORMED HERE

Formal Announcement Expected To Be Made Soon

Formal announcement of the formation of an industrial bank is expected to be made here within a few days the negotiations looking toward that end having reached a conclusive stage according to reports.

The industrial bank plan is a novel one here, the new institution being the first of its kind in this immediate territory, although the plan has been tried with success in other sections. The bank caters only to the small borrower, who desires to make a loan repayable at a monthly rate. The bank accepts no deposits, its backers stated, and is not intended to replace, to any extent, present banking facilities, but to augment them to take care of the salaried man who desires a small loan and who is without other security than his potentialities as a wage earner and a reputation for meeting his debts.

It is understood the plan has found favor with many people here who have indicated they will aid in its organization.

WORK PROGRESSES ON MASONIC BLDG.

Lodge Quarters To Be Occupied Probably In Two Weeks

Work is progressing on the Masonic building, crews of workmen now being engaged in the interior, with the expectation that the lodge quarters on the third floor will be ready for occupancy within two weeks.

The contractor will then begin work on the second floor, which will be occupied as office space by a local company, after which the first floor offices will be finished.

When completed the building will be one of the most attractive in the city and will provide much additional office space for commercial purposes as well as rooms for the lodge. It is believed that the upstairs offices will be ready for occupancy by the first of April.

This is the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, with its thousands of towers, mountains, forts, peaks of every shape and color, rising up from the canyon's floor one mile down.

THERE are many kinds of folly. The champion kind would be an attempt to describe this scene. It is more than twenty miles from this typewriter, moved out of doors, to the other rim of the canyon. "WOLF OF LASALLE" WRITES A CLOSING CHAPTER TO TERM

Worthington Dies As He Is Serving Two Years In Pen

WAS ONCE AN ALA. BANKER

Made Will Before He Was Sentenced To Prison

(Associated Press)

ATLANTA, March 2.—John Whitehouse Worthington of Chicago, known as the "Wolf of LaSalle street," died at the Federal Penitentiary, Atlanta, today where he was serving a term for using the mails to defraud. Death was caused by paralysis. Worthington who was brought here October 10 to serve two years was an invalid when he entered the prison, suffering from diabetes and a former paralytic stroke. He had to be carried to the penitentiary. Worthington's operations are estimated to have netted him more than $2,500,000.

At one time he was head of a chain of banks in Alabama, then he became a confidence operator and piled up a fortune from speculative ventures which later involved him with the government and caused his flight to Mexico.

Making his will before entering prison, Worthington directed that the bulk of his fortune go to his daughters: Mrs. Allen Tika, 1625 East 57th Street, Chicago, known in moving picture circles as Jane Allen; and Mrs. John Rodgers of New Rochelle, L. I. Another $200,000 was bequeathed to his granddaughter, Miss Helen Rodgers and $25,000 to Dr. Ronald McKibbin, a Los Angeles physician.

Below the pale moon, almost full, the sky is a dark rose purple. Below the purple there is a dark broad band of heavy blue. The moon, queen of Heaven, rides in triumph on a colored throne as wide as the sky.

GIRL DISAPPOINTED IN A LOVE AFFAIR, SWALLOWS POISON

Midnight Quarrel Over Telephone Has Fatal Ending

DIES ON HER WAY TO THE HOSPITAL

Josephine Brannon, 18, Decides To End Life When Rejected

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 2.—While being rushed to the Hillman hospital in an automobile, shortly before three o'clock this morning, Josephine Brannon, 18, of 1701 Eighth avenue, N., died from the effects of poison which she is said to have taken a short time before while on a party with two men.

The two men, Andrew Ellis, 3514 North 14th street, and Alfonso Naro, 1040 North 36th street, were questioned by officers shortly after their arrival at the hospital, but later were released until further orders.

Coroner J. D. Russell was investigating the case.

According to information received at police headquarters, Miss Brannon died while being taken to the hospital in an automobile owned and driven by Andrew Ellis. Although the exact cause of the girl's death had not been learned, it was laid to an unhappy love affair which terminated in a telephone quarrel about 12 o'clock Monday night.

According to one source of information Miss Brannon and a soldier had been sweethearts for sometime. It was said that she was seriously in love with him, whereas he did not return her affections.

Finally, unable to stand the unsatisfactory relationship longer, Miss Brannon telephoned her friend near midnight Monday and "had it out" with him over the phone, receiving no encouragement from him and the girl is said to have become very nervous and to have taken the attitude that "nothing matters any more."

She is said to have called upon a girl friend at that late hour, requesting her to be a member of a party. However, the latter declined and so, evidently determined to forget it all in a night of revelry, Miss Brannon went alone with the two men, police said.

Miss Brannon, a former resident of Birmingham, had been living with her sister, Mrs. Clarence Yeagen, of Dallas, Texas, for several weeks. Previous to going to Texas Miss Brannon had been receiving pecuniary assistance from her sister and it is said that were on the best of terms. The girl had only been in Birmingham a day and a half at the time of her death, according to one report.

On February 7, Miss Brannon wired her sister in Dallas the following telegram:

"Am sick. Wire ticket. If you will come, answer."

Shortly after that she is said to have left Birmingham. The body is being held pending advice from her sister in Texas.

JURISDICTION OF ECHOLS HILL YET IS LIVE SUBJECT

Citizens Deplore The Condition Of Highway

ALDERMEN MAY SEND AN INQUIRY

Official Says Road Was Turned Over To State For Upkeep

The status of the jurisdiction of Echols Hill, with resultant responsibility for its repair, continued today to be a live subject of discussion among local citizens, who deplored the present condition of the thoroughfare.

Echols Hill is the direct approach to the Twin Cities for all motorists going northward on both the Bee Line highway and the Somerville highway and traffic over the road is unusually heavy. It originally was a good, substantial asphalt road, but has crumbled beneath the heavy traffic and now is full of holes.

The condition of the road necessarily not only is exceedingly uncomfortable for persons forced to travel it, but it creates a very bad impression on visitors as they drive into the city.

A city official told The Daily that the road had been turned over to the state for upkeep, but so far the state has had completed any repairs.

A county official advanced the opinion that possibly the question of right-of-way may have entered into the problem, inasmuch as in other projects, the federal government has insisted on uniform rights of way before matching state funds with federal highway money.

Another citizen offered the suggestion that the city council inquire of the state highway commission what the actual status of the road at present is, and to inquire whether or not any steps have been taken looking to its repair.

Thus is the discussion being fed by a diversity of opinion, which appears to be united on only one point, namely, that repairs should be made without delay.

Fund Raised To Pay For New Pews

Pews for the new Grant street Church of Christ are expected to be received this week and probably will be installed and ready for service by one week from the approaching Sunday.

At the services the past Sunday a fund of $250 in cash and $250 in pledges was raised quickly to be applied on the payment for the pews. The congregation of the Grant street church is proud of its record of having shouldered the entire building program burden, with only $250 contributed from outside sources. This contribution, however, was very much appreciated, but the congregation plans to make no appeal for funds from the public.

Unusual Suits Set For Hearing

SHOALS ROAD SOON TO BE CONSTRUCTED

Unofficial Reports Say Ninety Days At The Most For Start

The Muscle Shoals-Courtland-Albany-Decatur highway will be placed under construction within the next ninety days, according to unofficial reports reaching here today. This construction is to be done by the state highway department and does not include the construction now underway near Fish Pond farm by J. W. Gwin, contractor, for which Courtland and Albany-Decatur citizens contributed.

Announcement that the Shoals road is soon to be under construction is received here with enthusiasm, opening as it does a vast trades resource into these cities from the western section of Morgan county and the eastern half of Lawrence county. The highway is in fair condition between here and Courtland with the exception of the two mile stretch from the Morgan county line to Fish Pond farm, where the Morgan road joins the Lawrence county chert road. This two mile portion of road has been impassable for some months and called for action on the part of business interests of these cities and Courtland.

75 Men Employed On Improvements

LEADERS HOPE TO FORCE BALLOT BY CLOSE OF THE DAY

Belief Expressed That Favorable Decision Will Be Recorded

PROPOSERS WIN FIRST SKIRMISH

Norris' Point Of Order Is Overruled By Big Majority

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Senate leaders hoped to force a final roll call today on the joint resolution, authorizing a commission to negotiate bids for Muscle Shoals. It has the endorsement of President Coolidge and already has been approved by the house.

When it comes to a vote it is believed it will be adopted by a substantial majority.

The first skirmish at this session of the senate, over the Shoals issue, was won late yesterday by proponents of the concurrence resolution.

Chairman Norris of the senate agricultural committee, who left a sick bed to lead the opposition, failed in an attempt to quash the resolution by a point of order, Vice President Dawes ruling against the point of order, after listening to an hour's argument and his ruling was sustained by a vote of 56 to 15 on an appeal.

Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama who called the resolution from the calendar made an extended speech in which he pleaded with the senate to adopt the resolution without amendment. After his address, two amendments were offered. One was by Senator George, democrat of Georgia, and would have all of the power not needed for the manufacture of fertilizer, distributed to nearby states, with the understanding it could be recalled if it should be needed, to make fertilizer for the farmer. The rates on the power would be fixed by existing agencies in the states. The other amendment was submitted by Senator McNary, republican Oregon, which would broaden the power of the proposed joint committee to negotiate bids for Muscle Shoals, outside the terms of the resolutions, if the first negotiations failed.

The point of order was made on the grounds it would violate the original Muscle Shoals law, which was drafted by Senator Smith, democrat, of South Carolina. This law, it was contended, specifically provided that Muscle Shoals should not be leased to private interests while the house resolution authorized a private lease.

Prominent Woman Passes To Beyond

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at three o'clock for Mrs. Kate Austin Walker, well known and widely beloved local resident, who died Monday evening at Benevolent Hospital at 7:30 o'clock.

The body was conveyed to the late residence, 407 Ferry street. Funeral services will be conducted by Rev. C. C. Davison and Rev. R. T. Tyler, pastor the Baptist and Methodist churches respectively. Interment will be made in city cemetery, Brown directing.

Mrs. Walker was born and reared here and had been a prominent resident of Decatur all of her life. She is survived by two sons, J. Knox and Todd Walker.

STYOPIS

Prince Michael Yervedoff, wealthy Russian in Paris, becomes interested in Colette, pretty street reveler. Michael's younger brother, Paul, whom he has always shielded from life, arrives for a visit. To get him away from the loose merry-making, Michael sends him up to bed. But Dolores, one of Michael's cat-boys, sees in Paul a tool for revenge and tamps him. Michael, finding them, is angry and disturbed.

"It is past three, Paul, and we have a busy day ahead of us. I suggest that you get some sleep. I am sure that Mademoiselle will excuse you."

Paul glanced at his brother questioningly. There was something mysterious in this. But obedience to Michael was a habit too deeply implanted to be thwarted on first thought. He turned to Dolores.

"Goodnight, Mademoiselle, and remember, I shall count the hours until our next dance."

Hardly had Paul left the room when Michael whirled to Dolores, his face livid with anger.

"I thought you had gone!"

Dolores was all ice and snow and remote solitude.

"I was about to leave, Monsieur, when your brother returned here, and courteously begged me to stay a while longer. He pleaded in the same convincing manner that you used to employ, and—well, you see!"

What a different Dolores was speaking now! Her voice rang vibrantly with cold defiance and challenge.

"He found my presence a little more enjoyable than you seem to," she added with a taunting gesture.

"I presume he did," said Michael, further upset and enraged as he caught sight of the emptied wine glasses.

"Mon Dieu! You know that I

The Yervedoff emerald was there before her!

never let Paul touch a drop of wine in my house, or whenever I have been with him! It is you whom I shall remember as the person who first plied him with champagne. It is you—"

Dolores interrupted imperiously, haughtily: "You flatter me, Michael. Only a few hours ago you spoke as though you never wanted to think of me again and now I am to be remembered, eh? I am overwhelmed, indeed; but possibly other events may happen soon which will refresh your memory of me still further." Dolores wrapped her sable coat around her, bent an ironic, mysteriously threatening smile upon Michael and departed.

There was nothing left for the flattered Michael to do but take his rage and his pique to his room. Alone there, he brooded over Dolores' words. Was it a threat? Was she trying to strike at him through Paul? Could she harm Paul?

In the first stage of his undressing Michael impatiently drew his watch from his pocket, to place it, as was his wont, on the bureau.

He gave a gasp of astonishment. The fob with the Yervedoff emerald was gone!

CHAPTER III

In the combined sitting room and kitchen of her little apartment in the Rue Chantignon next afternoon, Colette sat thinking of the events of the night before. What a change, what a difference, from the splendor of Monsieur Michael's dwelling to the shabbiness of her own humble home with its olden furniture, its dreary outlook. Gazing out of the window all Colette could see were the rows upon rows of small, uninteresting houses that are typical of the left bank of the River Seine, the same black poverty, the same dour struggle for life, eternally present in each of them—while across the river, in Michael's neighborhood, were wealth, gaiety and happiness.

Well, for one night Colette had had her fling! She smiled, dreamily enraptured by visions of the sumptuous party. And Michael? She wondered what he had thought when he found that "Columbine" had so mysteriously disappeared.

In truth, Colette, herself, hardly knew why she had departed so unceremoniously. It was just a whim to leave at the height of the merry-making so that her memory of it would always be of unalloyed happiness unclouded by the usual dregs of such cups of careless dissipation.

The door of an adjoining room opened and a curly-headed, brown-eyed little boy of four years ran in and embraced himself into Colette's lap.

"I don't want to go to bed now, auntie," he said. "Cause I'm not sleepy. I want to play with you. Can't I get up?" he asked, giving her a slow, clinging hug that contained a strong hint of bribery.

"No, no, Billy! You were up late last night, and your sleep was broken again when the pretty lady came in and showed herself to you in the night." Now, back to bed with you and there will be no bon-bons—and no playing in the Bois!" Billy reluctantly went back to the bedroom in which his small cot was placed close to the protecting side of Colette's plain, single white bed.

To Colette, Billy represented the sum and substance of her life's happiness and pleasure. Her sister had married a worthless clerk, who was too indolent to work and too cunning to be honest. Since her death, more than two years before, Colette had taken care of both Billy and his good-for-nothing father. Emile, her brother-in-law, had the third room of the tiny apartment, but he was hardly ever at home—and when he was he treated Billy so harshly, and was so much of a bully in general, that she welcomed his absence.

Luckily, Colette's fingers were nimble enough for her to make a living by fashioning artificial flowers at home. Sometimes Emile turned in a little money but Colette always took it with misgivings, wondering whether or not the money had been earned honestly.

Last night Colette had obtained, for a hard earned franc, the services of a woman on the floor below to sit with Billy while she was out celebrating the Fete. But upon Colette's return, Billy had awakened and had seen her in the Columbine costume.

"What a beautiful lady," he had said gravely, not recognizing his Aunt in the fluffy disguise as he sat up in bed and rubbed his sleepy eyes, "and what did you bring me?"

"Lots of things," Colette had cried, sitting on the bed beside him. "See!—here are apples, raisins, bon-bons and this great big balloon. But you must go to sleep again, or you will find them flown by morning!"

Billy had failed to sleep again, almost immediately with an apple tightly clasped to each hand.

"Well," Colette now chuckled, with the brittle matter-of-factness of her kind, "the Fete is over—to work once more! But first, the costume must be packed away." Crossing to the chair where the shimmering garment of her play hour lay, she started to fold it. As she smoothed out each cherished ruffle, the gleam of a jewel caught her eye. She swiftly turned back the folds of lace, then gave a gasp of astonishment—for the precious stone of Michael's fob, the Yervedoff emerald, was there before her!

"How did it get here?" she kept stammering in frantic nervousness as she unjangled the gem and held it up with a trembling hand.

(She noticed that the gold clasp which evidently attached the fob to Michael's watch, had broken. The only solution that presented itself to her was that either when Michael was carrying her to the balcony, or when he was bathing her forehead, it must have caught in her dress.)

A torrent of conflicting thoughts washed through her brain. To Michael, that jewel—save for sentimental reasons—meant nothing. He would miss it, yes, but he could easily buy another.

To her, the money for which it could be sold, offered a rare and enticing prospect of clothes, food, and visits to the country, not only for herself but for Billy. Why, the means with which she could realize all the fondest desires of her heart lay now in the palm of her hand—in this flashing emerald!

Then Colette suddenly and resolutely caught herself, and sent the pendulum of her thoughts swinging the other way. Would money thus gained bring happiness? Would it mean happiness if she and Billy were playing in the fields together, chasing butterflies and picking daisies, only to have the thought hunt her that their pleasures had been realized at the price of theft?

CHRISTIANS TELL OF THE LORD'S WORK

Testimonials Open The Monday Meet of Revival

People attending the revival services at the Church of God, Monday evening inspired each other with recalling the many good things with which the Lord had blessed them. This service preceded the regular service, conducted by Rev. A. Q. Bridwell.

The pastor spoke from the Second chapter of the Gospel, recorded by St. Mark, to show how the disciples worked to bring a poor, sick, sinful man to Jesus, even when they could not bring him by the door they had taken him upon the housetop made an opening and let him down in the presence of Jesus who forgave his sins and healed his body.

Jesus was preaching the word. We need men who will preach the full Gospel. Men must submit to the Gospel in order to be saved. This man submitted and was saved, the pastor continued.

In conclusion the pastor asked, "Are you helping to bring someone to Jesus by the way you live, by the way you talk, by the way you do business, by being honest, truthful and upright? Are you praying for poor lost men and women?"

The subject announced for tonight is, "Sin Survived and Died." The public is invited to attend.

Lady Says Her Back "Hurt Night and Day"—Least Noise Upset Her. Better After Taking Cardui.

Winfield, Texas—"My back hurt night and day," says Mrs. C. L. Mason, of R. F. D. 1, this place. "I ached and ached until I could hardly go. I felt weak and did not feel like doing anything. My work was a great burden to me. I just hated to do up the dishes, even. I was no-account and extremely nervous."

"My mother had taken Cardui and she thought it would do me good, so she told me to take it. My husband got me a bottle and I began on it. I began to improve at once. It was such a help that I continued it until after the baby's birth."

"I took eight bottles and I can certainly say that it helped me. It is a fine tonic. It built me up and seemed to strengthen me. I grew less nervous and began to sleep better."

"I can certainly recommend Cardui to expectant mothers, for to me it was a wonderful help. In every way I felt better after taking it and I think it is a splendid medicine."

Talk Continues Regarding Meeting This Evening For Launching of Civic Drive

Further indication that citizens are heartily in accord with the plan for raising $50,000 here as an industrial inducement, was seen today as individuals approached workers who will gather tonight and assured them of support in the probable forth coming campaign. The workers who will determine whether a drive will be made are meeting tonight at the Savoy Cafe with James' host.

Prominent business men who are not included in the list of guests at this evening's gathering indicated today that they were willing to back the judgment of the executive committee of the hospital board, which board will handle the industrial drive, with their own money. It is likely that the executive board will be held intact.

The executive committee of the Clarke County Baptist church at Jackson recently went on record as opposed to any modification in the Volstead act on the prohibition law of the United States.

Don't Neglect That Stubborn Hacking Cough

It is not only dangerous but entirely unnecessary to let a persistent, hacking cough rob you of sleep and strength. For through a very simple treatment you can get almost instant relief, and very often break the most stubborn cough completely in 24 hours.

This treatment is based on the famous prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful at bed-time and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of night coughing. So the coughing quickly ceases and you sleep right through undisturbed.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

Since 1903, when the Ford Motor Company was formed, Ford cars have been constantly improved in quality, comfort, convenience and appearance. Recent improvements include new and attractive body lines—a lower center of gravity—closed cars in color, and all-steel bodies.

The basic features of Ford design have been retained. Three point motor suspension, planetary transmission, dual ignition system, torque tube drive, multiple disc-in-oil clutch, splash lubrication, thermo-siphon cooling system—all have been features of the Ford car for eighteen years. On the whole these features cost far more to manufacture than conventional design but are used because of their superiority.

The Ford Motor Company has carried out a program of price reduction that has consistently kept Ford value supreme in the automotive industry. This has been made possible by the enormity of Ford production. With lesser resources, Ford quality would not be possible at anywhere near Ford prices.

The tremendous demand for Ford closed cars has again made possible substantial price reductions.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO THE REPORTED REORGANIZATION OF THE DEMOCRATIC MACHINE?

A few weeks ago, a group of party leaders met in Washington and were reported to have discussed plans for the reorganization of the national Democratic party organization, hoping thereby to fit the party machinery for something better than adornment only. Since then, little has been heard of the plan.

This is to be regretted, for if ever there was a year when the democrats had a chance to make a good showing in the congressional races, it is this year. The party, however, cannot expect the individual states to wage their own battles. The national organization should be in position to help and should help.

The democrats have 39 senators now and there are eight more classified as insurgent-republicans and one farmer-labor. Ordinarily these can be counted as the "anti-administration bloc." It so happens that all democratic senators who come up for election this year are from states which nearly always vote democratic, so the party stands little chance of losing any of its present strength.

On the other hand, of the republicans to come up for re-election this year, there are said to be ten who come from states likely to go either republican or democratic. In other words, the democrats have about an even chance to get some of these ten places, provided the party works for them.

Another source of possible strength and comfort for the democrats is the likelihood that the representation of the insurgents will be increased by the capture of additional places from the west. It does not require a great deal of calculation to discover that the democrats could threaten seriously the republican domination of the senate, if the opportunity should be grasped.

In the house, so many members come up for election this year, any party could obtain control by winning enough of this fall's elections. If the democrats work, they have a golden opportunity.

MISSISSIPPI NEWSPAPERS PLAN TO DEFY JUDGE'S ORDER AND PRINT NEWS

Press dispatches from Mississippi indicate that the editors of newspapers in the Bay St. Louis section of that state intend to remain editors of their papers and have no intention, whatever, of turning their editorial duties over to Judge Walter A. White, who directed that no news be printed regarding the trial of Jesse Favre, indicated in connection with the killing of William Minge and John McLemore, near Pieayun.

Judge White appears to have taken the position the right of the newspapers to publish legitimate news can be curtailed, when, in the opinion of the court, the public welfare will be served by such prohibition. The editors take the opposite position and it is indicated they will test the question out in every court into which it can be taken.

In attempting to throttle the press Judge White assumes to himself important rights and considerable responsibility. The Daily is not familiar with all of the intricate details of the case, nor is the Daily entirely acquainted with other issues, which, no doubt, are a part of the controversy, but the Daily does feel that the editors and not the courts should be the judge of what information is printed in the papers published by those editors.

The publication of information or misinformation concerning the Favre trial would defeat the ends of justice, is the opinion of Judge White as quoted by an Associated Press dispatch, which reads:

"Reporters or correspondents in performance of their duty, or what they conceive to be their duty," Judge White said, "probably can see no harm in the publication of their reports but the courts can and does see a very important reason for prohibiting publication of testimony in this case. Any information or misinformation in reference to this case may defeat the effort of the court to have it tried before an intelligent jury. With this suggestion to the newspapers, if their purpose is to serve the interest of their respective communities, they will not publish anything with reference to this case without referring its subject matter to some official of this court with a view of seeing that the report does not constitute an infraction of this order."

Needless to say, violation of the order is threatened with that old time favorite form of punishment, jail sentence for contempt of court, which virtually eliminates the possibility of appeal.

If there be any medals for persons possessing pure, unadulterated gall, the Mississippi jurist certainly is deserving of especial consideration, before the award is made.

If the order of the Mississippi judge does not aim a blow at the right of free speech, then, when, may we ask has there ever been an effort made to curtail this right? The Mississippi law plainly sets forth when and where newspaper stories of trials are not to be published, and when the public is not to hear the proceedings. The Favre trial, dispatches indicate, does not fall into the class thus individually treated by the statutes. Yet, a circuit Judge a man who above all others is supposed to know what the rights and liberties of the newspapers and the people are, arbitrarily sets forth an edict which transfers the editorial duties from the newspaper office to his own courtroom, and backs his order with a jail sentence.

No doubt, in some dusty legal volume, the jurist has built up for himself some kind of legal background for his unusual pronouncement. A man of the legal learning he must possess, surely, would have no trouble in making out some kind of defense for his acts, yet he will have a difficult job convincing the Mississippi newspapers and the Mississippi people generally that he has a right to select what court news the papers may print.

AGAIN THE COMMUNITY FACED A CRISIS IN ITS EXPANSION.

The Twin Cities again are facing a crisis in their program of industrial expansion and, gathered around the banquet board this evening at the Savoy cafe, a group of men, interested in the welfare of this community, will decide whether we shall rest on our laurels already won or press forward to further victories.

The fate of the proposed $50,000 drive for 50,000 people will be settled largely by the attitude of the men attending the banquet this evening. Their enthusiasm for civil work, or their lack of it, will have a great deal to do with whether the strides made by Albany-Decatur this year will be long ones or short ones.

Situated as they are, the Twin Cities cannot escape receiving a good share of the general industrial blessing now meted to the Tennessee Valley. With the public's share in two great undertakings—the highway bridge across the river and the hospital campaign—already behind us as things accomplished, 1926 will be a good year but it can be made an infinitely better one, if the people of the Twin Cities refuse to be content with their own victories and continue their drive toward our proper place in the sun.

The eyes of the cities will be turned toward that little group which meets tonight, and their decision will be awaited with eagerness. The Twin Cities can accomplish what they have proved it strikingly in two recent undertakings. Is there any reason why we should not continue to press forward?

Within the past year Opelika, Ala., raised more than $100,000 to obtain a large mill for that city, Sheffield subscribed a $100,000 bond issue to obtain a plant with a payroll of 300 men for that city, and so the story goes. All over Alabama, other cities are raising funds to obtain industries. It is significant that few of these funds are outright donations. In most cases they are stock subscriptions, bond subscriptions or some other form of financing, which enables plants to remove to the cities subscribing, without weakening the working capital of the plans themselves.

If they are to get their share of industries seeking a new location, Albany and Decatur must be able to make financial inducements to these industries, so long as other communities can and do make these inducements. Fortunately, the Twin Cities have a great deal more to offer, in the way of natural resources, that do most communities. If we can meet other sections on anything like even terms financially, Albany and Decatur can and will obtain plants. To The Daily, it appears there is but one solution to the problem. We, too, must make financial inducements.

A tremendous responsibility rests upon the shoulders of those men who make the decision tonight. It is easy to become imbued with a spirit of civic consciousness but dreams alone, without effort cannot make come true. It is easy to talk about a fund of $50,000, but harder to raise it.

Failure to attain frequently leaves a worse condition in its wake than failure to attempt would have left. So, in the conference tonight, the conference must not forget that the decision they make for these communities must be carried into effect. To them falls the job of not doing a good deal of idle boasting, but of actually accomplishing a great civic task for their cities. Grim determination must mark their every endeavor.

To them, The Daily extends its best wishes, together with the hope that they will find a way to continue the great work already undertaken, and that they decision, whatever it shall be, will be backed by every resident of Albany and Decatur.

exposed layers of old earth that took millions of centuries to build, laid bare by the rushing waters, each with its color and character, each an open book to the geologist, showing exact age as plainly as you read it in a painted face.

THE shadows grow heavier with each passing moment, as the golden light fades, and the moon gently rises. Dark caverns appear in the canyon walls, twenty miles away, and seeming as near as the wall beside you. They say that Bishop Brown lost his religious faith, when astronomy taught him something about the size of the Universe. They convinced him that a soul on its way to Heaven would have to travel at the speed of light, for a million years, through a temperature at least one hundred degrees below zero before reaching the boundary of this universe, and the beginning of Heaven. That was too discouraging. Later reports say the journey would last one billion, instead of one million "light years." What of it. If Bishop Brown could sit here, he might feel his lost faith creeping back.

THE bottom of the canyon is almost black and the colors are fading, as they fade from the face of an old man. But tomorrow, those colors will return, in all their beauty. Night does not last, the sun returns.

THIS earth is but a grain of dust in space, if you like. But the power that can carve this canyon out of a grain of dust could do anything. It could even carry our tiny souls safely across an ethereal ocean one billion light years in width if those souls were worth carrying. Are we worth it or not? Is the important question.

MANY wonderful things are upon this rolling earth's surface, pyramids, sphinx, great monuments, cathedrals. Put them all down in some little corner at the bottom of this canyon, and you would need a telescope to find them. There are not seven wonders of the world, or seventeen, or two. There is only one, and this is it. Come and see it.

OUR feeble brains crave comparison, some measuring stick, "What is it like?" we ask. Not like anything you ever saw, or thought, or dreamed about. And here, when you look at it, you do not know what it is like. But this may help you.

Perhaps you have seen a great stadium with football playing, and 60,000 people looking on.

This is a stadium, of solid, golden, many colored rock. And there are about sixteen hundred million people on this earth. In this little section of the canyon, you could arrange a stadium supplying roomy, separate seats for each one of the sixteen hundred million, and leave room, in the upper rows of seats, for five thousand millions more.

If five hundred millions of them shouted together at one side of the arena, those on the other side would hear only a feeble murmur, if they heard anything.

MUST feeble man abase himself, cringe and say, "I am nothing," as he looks into this gulf? Not at all. He can say, imitating a well known genius, "I also do things."

If the sixteen hundred millions did gather there, man with his radio, and amplifier, could make it possible for one voice to be heard by all.

And men at this moment are harnessing, for crops and power, the Colorado river that rushes by down there. That river is the power that dug out this Canyon, and in man's brain there is power that will make the river man's servant, power enough even to dig such a canyon as this, if he needed another.

This is a wonderful canyon, and like the heavens, it declares the glory of God. But man, a speck of the power that rules all, he also amounts to something. And he is a highly respectable insect when he respects himself and uses his brain.

FOR one thing be grateful. Postpone your coming as long as you must, you will find this canyon as it is today. Return reincarnated in ten thousand years. The bed of the Colorado will be a little lower, but no change in the canyon.

This scene of great beauty and power is the property of the nation, a national park, consecrated forever.

No men, no money making, no factories, chimneys, smoke or machinery can ever spoil it.

THOUGHTS

OF THE WEEK

By J. A. West

OUR BEAUTIFUL WORLD

What a beautiful world we live in, this world right at our every door.

Canopied above with beautiful blue, and hung in every direction with tapestries which no artist has ever been able to duplicate. There are so many varied scenes to greet the eye of man, and so many varieties of music coming each day from Nature's orchestra, that there is little reason for there ever being a dull moment in the life of any, if they will look up, see and listen.

In the early morning, the day is started with a beautiful picture, as streams of golden light shoot here and there in the eastern horizon, announcing that the King of Day is making ready to begin the journey across the heavens, carrying health and happiness in his rays which penetrate every nook and corner of the globe. In his passage, stimulating effect is given to untold millions of plants, and every form of vegetation takes on new life as moisture and sunlight gives of its enervating influence.

Adown the western slope goes this sphere of glaring brightness, announcing the closing of a perfect day, signalling back to earth's mortals through a flood of crimson glory that the day is done, as faint outlines continue to linger long after the brightness has vanished.

Then comes the hush of evening like a soft vesper bell, as the world about us is wrapt in darkness, and a gentle silence pervades, taking the place of the bustle and activity of the day.

A silver moon peeps over the eastern horizon flooding the world with its mellow light, ready to do its great part in the plan of its Creator, and shimmering beams of moonlight dart here and there o'er hill and vale, and into the deep recesses of the mountain passes, and into the thickness of the forests away from every sound of human ingenuity.

Now the night orchestra begins: The hoot, hoot of the wise old owl, deep down in the woodland, is the signal that the music of man is over, and the orchestra of the forest appears at the footlights.

Who has not stood awe inspired on a beautiful moonlight night, away from the sound of the busy hum of man's industry, and listened to the music of night, as each performer does its very best with no thought of applause.

The varied scenes; the woodlands, where giant trees tower upward toward the sun from which they get strength and vitality to send its roots deep into mother earth; the awe inspiring mountains as they rear their huge formations and stand as sentinels defying civilization to molest their peaceful habitation; the winding streams and rivers which thread their way through rich alluvial soil, and splash and dash through deep mountain passes, each hurrying onward to the sea; the dew of night, made into diamond drops as the brightness of the morning sun penetrates it; the broad expanse of meadows, stretching away like a carpet of green, affording a delightful picture as far as the eye can penetrate; the beautiful flowers of spring which bloom in profusion all about us; the friends, who talk with us down the pathways of life; the opportunities of doing something constructive as we pass along; the laughter of childhood with all its innocence; the sacrifices of those who loved and are gone; this new day which comes with never ceasing regularity; these, are just a few of the blessings which it is our privilege to enjoy on this short journey, short at best, and made beautiful all the way.

Warn Against Unlicensed Cars

(Associated Press)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 2.—Evidently some auto owners in Alabama have enough repair bills and upkeep on their cars that they cannot afford to pay for licenses. This seems to be the case following the announcement from Commissioner F. C. Marquis of the state tax commission, who has ordered all license inspectors to be on the lookout for licenses illegally in use.

Seven automobile license tags were recently missed at the state capital, and it is the conclusion of Commissioner Marquis, of the state tax commission's office, they are illegally in use, and the users will be made accountable for them, if found.

The notice to license inspectors sent out by Commissioner Marquis gave the numbers of each of the tags. All are "A" tags for private automobiles.

The numbers listed were: Private A-208121, Private A-208145, Private A-208146, Private A-208147, Private A-208148, Private A-208149, Private A-208150.

NEW FACTS ON AIR IN CROWDED ROOMS

Discomfort in Breathing Is Due to the Atmosphere Being Overheated by People's Bodies and Not to "Worn Out" Ozone.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

I WONDER, sometimes, if everything we believe today will be overthrown in time. Almost every day some long believed, commonly held view is cast aside as "unscientific."

What makes me speak this way is because of some reports I have just read on the subject of ventilation. The popular idea is that the air in a public building becomes contaminated and that, in consequence, breathing it makes us feel weak or ill.

The element in the air which is believed to make it harmful is carbonic acid gas, as it is popularly named, or carbon dioxide, as the scientists call it. Prof. Flogge and others carried on a series of experiments to determine the effects of "bad air" on the persons who breathed it.

Men were shut up in a tight cabinet for a period of time, as long as four hours. Breathing and rebreathing the air it soon became impregnated with carbon dioxide. Strange to say, no particular discomfort was felt. Neither was the mental efficiency lowered. So long as the temperature and moisture of the air inside the cabinet were kept low, the prisoners were comfortable.

In another experiment the temperature and moisture inside the cabinet were permitted to increase and at the same time the carbon dioxide content had grown high. The men became very uncomfortable. They were permitted to take into their lungs through a tube cool, fresh air from outside the chamber. This gave no relief whatever.

But when a fan inside the chamber was set in motion and the vitiated air was cooled, the prisoners became comfortable.

In still another experiment, while the men inside the chamber were very comfortable, men outside were made to breathe through a tube and to depend on the air drawn from inside the chamber. The men in the side the chamber, who breathed the cool air outside did not suffer at all.

The discomfort of a public gathering is not due one-tenth as much to the chemical contents of the air as it is to the overheating of the air from the temperature of many human bodies. You get some idea of how the temperature of a room is raised by going into a public hall early. It seems cold then, but after it has filled with people it gets warm and even hot.

You see body temperature is just under 100 degrees. A room feels warm when heated to 75 degrees. Let a multitude of persons crowd into a room and the temperature will soon go above the degree of comfort. Everybody will be gasping for breath, imagining that the "poisoned air" is responsible.

In the open, the puffy winds give your body a spray of cool air now and then. This stimulates and refreshes you. On this account for most purposes properly controlled open window ventilation will always be preferable to any artificial system.

Answers to Health Queries

F. T. Q.—Is whooping cough contagious?

A.—Yes, it is contagious.

MRS. E. L. Q.—I am troubled with gas and have been taking mineral oil but it has not entirely cleared up the trouble. Is it harmful to continue taking the oil?

A.—What do you advise for gas which causes a cramping sound whenever it is bent. The trouble may be due to a fall.

A.—Proper attention to the diet and regular intestinal elimination should correct your trouble to a great extent. Mineral oil is a habit forming and may be taken over a long period of time without harmful effect. It is merely a lubricant, not a laxative.

Z.—This condition is probably due to a lack of synovial fluid around the joint. Massaging with warm cod liver oil before retiring at night should be helpful. Bandaging during the day until the parts become stronger should also be of benefit.

MRS. M. D. R. Q.—What should a woman of nineteen, 5 feet 8 1/2 inches tall, weigh?

A.—Are reducing soaps harmful?

A.—She should weigh about 130 pounds.

J.—If you restrict your diet and take plenty of outdoor exercise, it should not be necessary to resort to other means to reduce. For further particulars send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and repeat your question.

Reams is the capable leader, gave her impressions of the conference in story form, interesting her audience as no other has done. This was followed by the devotional. Mrs. A. W. Williamson presided over the business session which included some interesting reports from the secretaries of the circles. Revue Pleases First Nighters When Old-timers Reappear at Local Theatre

First nighters were pleased Monday evening at the Princess Theatre with the first performance of the "Bobbed Hair Revue," vaudeville company playing at the Princess throughout this week. The picture program was likewise enjoyed.

A number in the Bobbed Hair cast have played these cities previously and theatre goers were quick to recognize old favorites in the cast.

The three harmony bugs, Patsy Lyons, Mary Grey Allen and Andy White, offered something new in the way of real harmony. This trio can sing and does not attempt to scourge a public with horrible tunes masked under the name of harmony. Andy White is a show within himself with an unusual harmonizing tenor that experienced some difficulty in waking enthusiasm in the audience upon the first appearance. Later, however, he had his audience with him and quit singing of his own accord, not because the people sanctioned such decision.

The burnt cork team is refreshing in portrayal of African tendency in happy carelessness that last night kept the audience in a continuous ripple of laughter.

The chorus beautifully costumed, is not particularly well trained, but possessed some singing talent that is rarely found in shows of the type.

The Revue plays at the Princess all this week, as the announcer stated last night, if patronage is good, and if patronage is not up to standard, the stay will be indefinite.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens. I love a young man one year older than I. Before Christmas he became angry with me, because I talked to his brother and he thinks I love his brother better than he.

Please tell me what to do to gain his love back. WORRIED GIRL.

ANNIE LAURIE: Since you are not engaged to this young man his indignation is ill-founded, my dear. You have the right to speak to or go out with anyone you choose, and he must realize this. Talk to him about this and explain your viewpoint. If he still values your friendship he will be only too willing to understand.

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am a girl in my teens and have been keeping company with several boys I do not like. The one I love has stopped going with me, altogether but when we meet he is always polite to me. Tell me how I can win his friendship back. Billie

Billie:

If you have offended this young man you are at fault, then write him a nice little note asking him to call and talk it over with you. If he quit of his own accord you can only be nice to him when you have the chance, then he will see your interest and come back.

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am a girl in my teens and considered good looking. I went with a young man for sometime that I liked very much. He was always nice to me until the other day another girl visited in town and he went with her. After she left he came and told me he was quitting me. I have a friend in another town who cares for me, but I do not love him. Tell me what to do as this boy is coming here next month. He has proved he loves me in every way. Blue Eyes.

STILL AT WORK

County and city officers today still were at work on the Bryant case, but word was given out that there were no new developments. Officers are seeking the identity of the unidentified white man who fatally wounded T. A. Bryant, East Mark street grocer, who was shot down when he attempted to resist the robber.

Coming to U.S.

CROWN PRINCESS OF SWEDEN

The Crown Princess of Sweden has been invited to represent Sweden at the unveiling of the John Ericsson monument in Washington, May 29, and undoubtedly will attend with the Crown Prince.

in every way.

Blue Eyes:

Forget the young man who has offended you, he is not worthy of your thoughts. He surely does not care for you. Go with the other friend if you wish, his love seems worth it. Good luck.

PLEA OF CHICAGO FOR PROBE FAILS

Petition Voted Down By Senate Committee Unanimously

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON March 2—The senate immigration committee today declined to approve a senate investigation of outlawry in Chicago.

A petition by the Better Government Association of that city, presented to the senate by Vice President Dawes, was voted down unanimously and suggestion of some senators that it be referred to the labor and treasury departments were frowned upon by Chairman Johnson, who declared he did not want to "pass the buck."

"If there have been such violations of the law as has been pictured," Senator Johnson said, "officials of the Association know exactly where to go to obtain relief."

Senator Willis, republican of Ohio, had suggested that the treasury be given that part of the petition alleging that five breweries were operating openly in Chicago under police protection and that the labor department be given that part alleging that many immigrants were in Chicago unlawfully.

Bimba Not Guilty Of Blasphemy

(Associated Press)

BROCTON, Mass., March 2—Anthony Bimba, who was tried for blasphemy under an ancient Massachusetts statute, and for sedition, won and lost in Clemons county district court here today. Judge C. Carroll King, who presided at the trial of the young Lithuanian editor last week, today found him guilty on the sedition count, but not guilty on blasphemy charge. A fine of $100 was imposed for the sedition charge. An appeal was taken by the counsel for the defense and Bimba was released on $500 bond. The charges were based on utterances at a meeting here January 26.

Youth Recognized For Ability and Not For Experience, Is Present-day Opinion

(Associated Press)

LUVERNE, Ala., March 2.—Young men are gradually becoming respected for their ability, despite their lack of long years of experience. This is seen here in the election of H. Rounton Shows, 23, to the presidency of the Bank of Luverne.

With young Mr. Shows' election Luverne is claiming to have the youngest bank president in Alabama. Many young men have ascended to responsible positions in many firms, but it is quite infrequent that one is accorded the responsibility of the presidency of a bank.

As is general in banking institutions, the president has worked his way up by his long years of experience in many branches of the bank or by his record of handling financial affairs in other ways. Generally, a bank president is one with years of experience back of him.

Shows is the son of the late T. W. Shows, formerly the president of the bank, who died on February 15th. He was also a well known planter in Crenshaw county and beloved among the people of the community.

The young Mr. Shows first began his connection with the bank in an official capacity as assistant cashier. On January 25, 1924, he was promoted to the position of cashier which he has filled since that time, until now he becomes president. He is said to be endowed with his father's gift at banking and was an adept pupil under him. That young Mr. Shows has the confidence of the community is attested to by the fact that the board of directors of the bank showed little hesitancy in advancing him to this position. He is said to be a young man of sturdy habits, Christian character and general efficiency.

Taylor V. Shows, a brother was also promoted in that he is to succeed his brother as cashier. He is also considered as one of the leading young men of the town and an efficient banker.

With both these young men in charge of the affairs of the bank, it is said that they form perhaps the youngest banking combination in the state.

SMALLPOX REPORT TO BE INVESTIGATED

Dr. McRee Plans To Go To Eva Section To Check the Rumor

Dr. H. C. McRee, Morgan County health officer, planned to go to the Eva community this afternoon to investigate the reported presence of a case of smallpox in that vicinity.

There has been no serious outbreak of the disease in this county, Dr. McRee said, and health officers are using every means to prevent such an eventuality. One negro school suffered a number of cases, but most sections are practically free.

BIRMINGHAM WORRIED

(Associated Press)
BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 2—A smallpox scare was revived today following announcement of R. H. Drake, assistant director of sanitation, in charge of communicable disease, that his department unearthed a house in Fiddlesville, where eight negroes are infected with the disease.

One other new case was reported, Mr. Drake stated, bringing the total to nine in two days. A few other cases are under consideration, however, and the condition is not believed startling.

Fifty white children in the North Birmingham school and 26 at Acipco were vaccinated Monday by corps of workers under the direction of Mr. Drake. Last week 56 employees of the Continental Gin company and 200 children in Graymont negro school, received vaccination.

Historic Pageant To Attract Entire State When Held In Capital City

(Associated Press)
MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 1.

The Alabama Historical Festival and Pageant to be held here during the latter part of April is expected to attract state-wide attention and interest, since the history of the state will be depicted in all of its glory.

Attractive booklets setting forth historical facts with pictures portraying the rise of the state will be circulated soon in the interest of the event. William Mitchell, chairman of the program committee has charge of this publication and announced that these booklets will only in a small way forecast what is in store for the spectators at the pageant.

The history of the state will be presented in a series of pageants which are expected to extend over several days in order to depict the full account of Alabama's rise from a territory to one of the leading states in the nation.

A cast of 3,000 persons will be used staging the pageants and surrounding towns have been asked to participate in furnishing talent. A chorus of 100 voices besides soloists, a band of 100 pieces and a ballet of 400 girls will be used in connection with the presentation.

SPORTS

Carolians Seem Well On Way To Fourth Title Annexation; Meet Aggs.

Carolians. What a ring there is to that name, a name becoming a champion and the North Carolina Tarheels bear out such a statement by challenging the prowess of the Mississippi Aggies tonight over in Atlanta where the final game of the Southern Intercollegiate Conference tournament is being played. Carolina moved noiselessly forward to the finals last night with a jolt to the folks from Ole Miss, handing them a terrific beating 38-23. The Aggies were handing the Kentucky Wildcats a setback 31-26 on the same evening.

The Tarheel five has been grabbing championships for some years, having taken three titles back to the Carolina hills since journeying to Atlanta was in vogue. Strange to say, at least three men now on the Carolina team were with the flying five when the last two titles were hitched. Cobb, Dodderer and Devin find nothing new in championship battle, it is a business with them and unless they are shod with banana peels tonight, it is quite likely that they will run home with another strip, familiarly known as the bacon.

The Mississippi Aggies are going to give plenty of fight tonight, they demonstrated that when they took the Wildcats from Lexington into tow. The Aggies have been heralded as dark horses since the opening of the conference, but it seems time to call them something else as they have been wading through all opposition without the slightest difficulty. Scores at the end of the first half found the Aggies leading Kentucky 18-13. The margin did not change in the last half and the Aggies swept on with their five point advantage until the close of the game.
